... Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: A certain couple in our crowd is notorious for social climbing. They never accept an invitation until the last second, which to me means only one thing — they are holding off to see if something better turns up.

This couple has a habit of leaving parties early to go to other parties. They think it's smart to say, "We can only stay a minute because we have two other stops to make." I think this is an insult to the hostess. They imply that their presence is so desirable that they must favor the largest number with their fleeting presence.

How can a hostess protect herself against such phonies? —THE IN GROUP

Dear In: A hostess can just not invite such people, or she can invite them at the last minute after the first string has had a chance to accept or decline.

I see nothing insulting about going to more than one party in an evening, but the hostesses should be told in advance.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long self-addressed, stamped envelope. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. 1961, Field Enterprises, Inc.
